

Exponential Strategist, Keynote Speaker, Producer, Podcast Host, Advocate for the Future

Nancy Giordano

Nancy is an energizing voice for those ready to move from knowing what's next to actively (and intentionally) building it.

She doesn't predict the future; she argues for a better one. A corporate futurist, strategic provocateur, and champion of "Leadering", Nancy has been across stages in 17 countries helping leaders not just see what's coming but inspiring them to play bigger to meet it.

Her work sits at the intersection of exponential technology, equity and societal transformation, and she builds frameworks for the kinds of leadership, systems and civilization we all long for... and for seven generations to come.

Through keynotes, her podcast, writing, and advisory work, she convenes the conversations that don't simply map disruption but actively repattern it. She is drawn to the forces quietly converging at the edges of business, technology, and civilization, and to the visionary leaders at all levels willing to take this responsibility seriously.

Author of the Amazon bestselling book Leadering: The Ways Visionary Leaders Play Bigger, Nancy is a frequent panelist at South by Southwest, global keynote speaker, Singularity University guest lecturer, and the world's first TEDx licensee. She is recognized as one of the world's top female futurists, co-founder of the Femme Futurists Society and recent host of a global top 10% podcast, Futurist(Mom).

Leadering: The Ways Visionary Leaders Play Bigger

Amazon #1 bestseller. Leadership is built on yesterday; leadering confidently anticipates and shapes tomorrow. Available in hardcover, ebook and audiobook at leadering.us.